A Day of Thanks at the Sitka Center for Art and Ecology

Otis, OR – Each year, the Sitka Center for Art and Ecology relies on the help of over 150 volunteers to put on events, keep up with office work, do facilities maintenance – even fundraise. “Without volunteers,” says Executive Director Eric Vines, “there would be a much bigger gap between what we want to do and what we actually do.” Program Manager Jalene Case agrees: “Without volunteers, we would be a shadow of who we are – they are a huge part of what makes Sitka’s heart continue beating.”

On Saturday May 14th from 1 to 4pm, the Sitka Center will throw a Volunteer Appreciation Party to say a big “Thanks!” to all those individuals who have helped the organization achieve so much. Music and light refreshments will be provided, and the event will be open to the public. Past volunteers, friends and family of volunteers, future volunteers, neighbors and/or anyone else interested in learning more about the Sitka Center, its programs, and its community of supporters are warmly encouraged to attend.

Committed to expanding the relationships between art, nature and humanity, the Sitka Center for Art and Ecology is renowned for its workshop and residency programs. Exploration of the coastal environment has remained a key component to The Center’s vitality. Located on Cascade Head, with views of the Pacific Ocean, Sitka offers a place where artists come to inspire, create, and ultimately transform themselves.
